THE VACANT CHAIR.

BY RICHARD COE, JR.

When we gather round our hearth,
 Consecrated by the birth
 Of our eldest, darling boy,
 Only one thing marks our joy;
 'Tis the dreary corner, where
 Stands, unfilled, the vacant chair.

Little Mary, bright and best,
 Early sought her heavenly rest.
 Oft we see her in our dreams—
 Then an angel one she seems!
 But we often see her, where
 Stands, unfilled, the vacant chair.

But 'twere sinful to repine;
 Much of joy to me and mine
 Has the gentle Shepherd given.
 Little Mary is in heaven!
 Blessed thought while gazing where
 Stands, unfilled, the vacant chair.

Many parents, kind and good,
 Lost to them their little brood,
 Bless their Maker night and day,
 Though he took their all away!
 Shall we, therefore, murmur, where
 Stands, unfilled, the vacant chair?

Little Mary! angel blest,
 From thy blissful place of rest,
 Look upon us angel child,
 Fill us with thy spirit mild.
 Keep us by thy watchful care;
 Often fill the vacant chair.

[For Kentucky Gazette.]
Good for Rheumatism, or Uncle Dan's Sulphur Bath.

BY DR. HICKS.

In one of the mountain counties of Eastern Kentucky resided, not many years since, a queer genius, by the name of Daniel Dougherty, or, as he was more familiarly called, "Uncle Dan Dory."

Uncle Dan, in his youth, was said to be a rare whilkey chap, fond of fun and good whiskey, but as years crowded upon him, and the frosts of many winters whitened his locks, he became immensely pious, attached himself to that branch of the visible church known as Hardshells, or Iron Jackets, and essayed to lead in prayer at monthly meetings, and to exhort from the pulpit, as occasion required.

In person, he was tall, raw-boned, and stoop-shouldered, with immense feet and hands to match. He walked with a shuffling gait, and seemed to get over ground very laboriously—in fact, walking was, as he expressed it, one of his great crosses.

Uncle Dan was an invalid, and had studied his particular case in connection with Dr. Quain's Domestic Medicine until he became a monomaniac upon both subjects.

Rheumatism was the particular form of his disease, and, to eradicate this from his system at once and forever, he had learned from Dr. Quain that nothing was equal to a good "sulphur bath." Most unfortunately for our hero, he chose a bright Sabbath day, in the month of June, to experiment, and that too, the Sabbath of the monthly meeting, which was held about one mile from his residence.

Having resolved upon the time, Uncle Dan waited patiently until every member of his household had gone to meeting, and then commenced his preparation for the bath. He first procured a large hog-head, or cask, upon one end; this he placed upright, and having prepared a large quantity of sulphur matches, he proceeded to clamber into the cask. He had provided himself with a blanket to cover over the mouth of the cask, and thereby prevent the fumes of the burning sulphur from suffocating him. Everything being in readiness, Uncle Dan lit his matches, and endeavored to draw the blanket so as to prevent the fumes of sulphur from reaching his sinistralities, but, alas! he was unable to do this and was upon the verge of suffocation, when, in a frantic effort to escape from the cask, it was overturned, and rolled down a gentle declivity, carrying the unfortunate occupant with it. The cask had rolled but a few rods, when it plumped against a beehive, upsetting it, and setting at liberty about half bushel of enraged bees, and all of them, with the greatest unanimity, began paying their respects to Uncle Dan, who, being in a state of perfect nudity, was highly vulnerable to their polite attentions. With commendable promptitude he leaped from the cask, and commenced a beeline towards a pond in a meadow, about a quarter of a mile distant. We have often heard of people making a blue streak, but Uncle Dan made a black streak as he ran, literally black with raging, buzzing, stinging bees, about half gallon of which had succeeded in alighting upon him, and the remainder of the swarm was close upon him. He could hear the "onsanctified brutes," as he ever afterwards termed them, whistling through the air, like so many rifle-balls. On they went, through the garden, over fences, down the hill, Uncle Dan all the while taking most frantic leaps, and slapping the air with his hands in his unavailing efforts to free himself of his tormentors.—The pond in the meadow was now his only hope, and this would be soon reached; but, alas! here a fresh difficulty arose.—He had to pass a herd of cattle on his flight across the meadow.

A pat iarchial bull, thinking, no doubt, that Uncle Dan and the bees was a strange animal invading his peaceful domain, immediately gave chase. About a quart of bees failing to overtake Uncle Dan, now settled upon the bull, and goaded him to fury. He lashed his sides with his tail, and roared with rage and agony, and redoubled his efforts to overtake the fugitive. Uncle Dan seeing that all was lost, and the bull gaining on him rapidly, ascended an apple-tree, with a celerity surprising to one of his years. Here, with the bees swarming around his head, and the bull playing the earth, and bellowing fiercely beneath the tree, Uncle Dan maintained a "masterly inactivity," to use his own words, "playin' and cussin' by turns," till he couldn't tell which he did last.

Fortunately, the congregation returning from church, passed near the meadow, and recognizing Uncle Dan's voice, came to his relief, chased away his enemies, and carried him home, where he lived many years afterwards, but was never known to complain of rheumatism, having, as he expressed it, effected an "immedijit cure."

Ma k Twain on the Turkish Bath.

When I think how I have been swindled by books of oriental travel, I want a tourist for breakfast. For years and years I have dreamed of the wonders of the Turkish bath; for years and years I have promised myself that I would get enjoyment. Many and many a time, in fancy, I have lain in the marble bath, and breathed the slumbrous fragrance of eastern spices that filled the air; then passed through a weird and complicated system of pulling and hauling, and drenching and scrubbing, by a gang of naked savages who loomed vast and vaguely through the steaming mists, like demons; then rested for a while on a divan fit for a king, then passed through another complex ordeal, and one more fearful than the first; and finally swathed in small fabrics, was conveyed to a princely saloon and laid upon a bed of eider down, where eunuchs, gorgeous of costume, fanned me while I dozed, and dreamed, or contentedly gazed at the rich hanging of the apartment, the soft carpets, the sumptuous furniture, the pictures, and drank delicious coffee, smoked the soothing narghili, and dropped, at last, into a dreamy slumber, lulled by sensuous orisons from unseen censurers, by the gentle influence of the narghili's Persian tobacco, and by the music of fountains that counteracted the patter of summer rain.

That was the picture, just as I got it from incendiary books of travel. It was a poor miserable fraud. The reality is no more like it than the Five points are like the Garden of Eden. They received me in a great court, paved with marble slabs; around it were broad galleries, one above another, carpeted with costly matting, railed with unpainted balustrades, and furnished with huge rickety chairs, cushioned with rusty old mattresses incited with impressions left by the forms of nine successive generations of men who had reposed upon them. The place was vast, naked, dreary—its court a barn, its galleries stalls for human horses. The cadaverous, half nude varlets that served in the establishment had nothing of poetry in their appearance, nothing of romance, nothing of oriental splendor. They shed no entrancing odors—just the contrary. Their hungry eyes and their lank forms continually suggested one glaring, unsentimental fact—they wanted a "square meal."

I went up into one of the racks and addressed. An unclean starveling wrapped a gaudy talcloth about my loins and hung a white rag over my shoulders. If I had had a tub then, it would have come natural to take in washing. I was then conducted down stairs into the wet slippery court, and the first things that attracted my attention were my heels. My fall excited no comment. They expected it, no doubt. It belonged in the list of softening, sensuous influence peculiar to this home of eastern luxury. It was softening enough, certainly, but its application was not happy. They now gave me a pair of wooden clogs—benches in miniature—with leather straps over them to confine my feet (which they would have done, only I do not wear 13s.) These things dangled uncomfortably by the straps when I lifted up my feet, and came down in awkward and unexpected places when I put them on the floor again, and sometimes turned sideways and wrenched my ankles out of joint. However, it was all oriental, and I did what I could to enjoy it.

They put me in another part of the bath, which was not made of cloth of gold or Persian shawls, but was merely the unpretending sort of thing I have seen in the negro quarters in Arkansas. There was nothing whatever in this dim marble prison but five more of these biers. It was a very solemn place. I expected that the spiced odors of Araby were going to steal over my senses now, but they didn't. A copper colored skeleton, with a rag around him, brought me a glass decanter of water, with a lighted tobacco pipe in the top of it, and a pliant stem a yard long, with a brass mouth-piece to it. It was the famous "narghili" of the East—the thing the Grand Turk smokes in the pictures.—This began to look like luxury. I took one blast at it, and it was sufficient. The smoke all went down my throat. It came back in convulsive snorts through my nose. It had a vile taste, and the taste of a thousand infidel tongues that remained on that brass mouth-piece was vile still. I was getting discouraged. Whenever hereafter I see the cross-legged Grand Turk smoking his narghili, let me pretend bliss, on the outside of a paper of Connecticut tobacco, I shall know him for the shameless humbug he is.

The prison was filled with hot air.—When I had got warmed up sufficiently to prepare me for still warmer temperatures, they took the where it was—into a marble room, wet, slippery, and steamy, and laid me out on a raised platform in the center. It was very warm. Presently my man sat me down by a tank of hot water, drenched me well, gloved his hand with a coarse mitten, and began to polish me all over with it. I began to smell disagreeably. The more he polished the worse I smelt. It was alarming. I said to him: I perceive that I am pretty far gone. It is plain that I ought to be buried without any unnecessary delay. Perhaps you had better go after my friends at once, because the weather is warm, and I cannot keep long. He went on scrubbing, and paid no attention. I soon saw that he was reducing my size. He bore hard on his mitten, and under it rolled little cylinders, like maccaroni. It could not be dirt, for it was too white. He patted me down in this way for a long time. Finally I said it is a tedious process; it will take hours to peel to the size you want me. I will wait; go and borrow a jack-plane. He paid no attention at all.

After a while he brought a basin, some soap, and something that seemed to be the tail of a horse. He made up a prodigious quantity of soap suds, and deluged me with them from head to foot, without warning me to shut my eyes, and then swabbed me viciously with the horse tail. Then he left me there a statue of snowy lather, and went away. When I got tired of waiting, I went and hunted him up.—He was propped against the wall, in another room, asleep. I woke him. He was not disconcerted. He took me back and flooded me with exhausting hot water, then turbaned my head, swathed me with dry table-cloths, and conducted me to a raffish chicken-coop in one of the galleries, and pointed to one of those Arkansas beds. I mounted it, and vaguely expected the odors of Araby again. They did not come. The blank, monumental coop had nothing about it of that oriental voluptuousness one reads of so much. It was much more suggestive of the county hospital than anything else. The skinny servant brought a narghili, and I got him to take it out again without wasting any time about it. Then he brought the world-renowned Turkish coffee that poets have sung so rapturously for so many generations, and I seized upon it as the last hope that was left of my old dreams of eastern luxury. It was another swindle. Of all the unchristian beverages that ever passed my lips, Turkish coffee is the worst. The cup is smeared with grounds; the coffee is black, thick, unsavory of smell, and execrable in taste. The bottom of the cup has a muddy sediment in it half an inch deep. This goes down your throat, and portions of it lodges by the way and produces a tickling aggravation that keeps you barking and coughing for an hour.

Here ended my experience of the celebrated Turkish bath, and here also ended my dream of the bliss and the mortal revels in who passes through it. It is a malignant swindle. The man who enjoys it is qualified to enjoy anything that is repulsive to sight or sense, and he that can invest with the charm of poetry is able to do the same with anything else in the world that is tedious, and wicked, and dismal, and nasty.

[From the Farmers' Home Journal.]

How to Render Girls Independent.

In these revolutionary times every farmer, who is the father of one or more daughters, as he looks forward to the uncertain future must feel more or less solicitude as to what is to be their destiny in life. Even if he is blessed with wealth to bestow upon them at his death and to support them whilst he lives, he knows not but that some reckless fortune hunter may entice them into marriage, and squander it in a few years, and leave them with a family of little children to struggle with poverty and its attendant neglect. Secure the fortune to them as he may, by bonds and title deeds, he can not prevent it from taking wings and flying away, at the very moment when they most need it.

The country is so full of reckless, dissipated young men, with fair speech and winning behavior, seeking to induce upon innocent and unsuspecting females, that no thoughtful father can hide his eyes from the evils to which his daughters are hourly in this way exposed.

The question must force itself upon his mind—how can I make my daughters independent? How can I best prepare them to meet an emergency which I know is likely to arise in the future, and which I see has actually arisen in hundreds of cases around me? It is to direct the minds of your readers to one of the modes of preparing to meet this difficulty that I now write in your columns, Messrs. Editor.—My remedy is to train your daughters that they will be able to support themselves, if thrown upon their own resources. The habit, among the higher classes in Kentucky, and further South, hitherto, has been to educate daughters as if they were to do nothing towards their own support. Hence when thrown upon their own resources, in after life, many of them are perfectly helpless. Surely such a state of things ought not to be. The avocations thrown open to women in the South have been entirely too few. They may conduct a farm, keep a boarding house, a milliner's shop, and teach school, and that is about all. I see no good reason why the list of avocations in which a woman might honorably without unsexing herself, engage, might not be indefinitely extended. Why may she not sell goods, set type, keep books, edit newspapers, keep telegraph office, and pursue a hundred other occupations equally feminine. I see no reason in the world why she may not still be a true lady; I never see a brawny, masculine measuring off tape and calico and other articles of that ilk, but I feel like saying to him "you are cheating some woman out of an honest living and unsexing yourself. Be a man and do a man's work, and do not intrude into woman's province."

It was, however, especially to call the attention of farmers in Kentucky to the duty of training their daughters to become teachers that I took up my pen. Our common schools in Kentucky now need good teachers to where they have one. Liberto we have imported our teachers from abroad, to a great extent. Native teachers are, always, other things being equal, better adapted to their work than those who are not "to the man born." A large part of teaching can be better done by females than males. They have more patience and perseverance than men, and if properly educated, know better how to adapt their instructions to the infantile mind than our sex do. It is a useful occupation and may be made both honorable and profitable, if properly taken hold of by the right kind of people. In the Northern States, no woman, however high her social position, ever loses caste in the least in society by becoming a teacher of youth. With some foolish and silly people amongst us it is otherwise. They affect to look down with contempt upon the woman who exerts herself to become independent, though she may have more brains in her little finger than they have in their skulls. President Fillmore's daughter, an elegant and accomplished young lady, devoted herself to teaching, after she retired from the White House. Several of the most distinguished ladies of the South, since the war, have gone into the school room. I could name a score of the wives and daughters of generals, governors and senators, who have done so. They have set a noble example which the ladies of Kentucky ought to emulate. It is a truly noble occupation to teach the young idea how to shoot, to train up a higher race of men and women than now exists amongst us. No true lady was ever degraded by engaging in it, however high born or wealthy or influential she may have been. It is only light headed simpletons, who have not brains enough to estimate what is truly great and honorable, who will affect to condemn her for it. Then it is to be remembered that the education, which fits a girl to become a teacher of a high order fits her at the same time to adorn any position in society she may be called to fill.

I received a letter, a few days since, from the wife of a member of Congress, which had twenty-two words misspelled in double that number of lines. What a figure must she cut in Washington? Had her father trained her for a teacher, how much mortification would it have saved her.

I am not a Northern man, but they have one custom that I wish I could see introduced amongst us. Where the father is in moderate pecuniary condition, he educates the oldest boy and girl, thoroughly, and then sets them to work to educate their younger brothers and sisters by teaching them and sending them to good schools. In this way the whole family is educated. Why might it not be so amongst us? In this way if a man has a dozen daughters, they can all be educated thoroughly, simply by his educating the eldest and making her educate the second and the second the third, and so on to the end. Then if any of them marry unfortunately, or do not marry at all, they are independent. They can always make a good living wherever they go. Farmers of Kentucky, think of these things, and educate your daughters thoroughly if you can do nothing else for them.

A True Kentuckyan.

George Whitefield.

Henry Vincent writes from Newburyport, Mass., to an English paper of Geo. Whitefield's remains:

"What created the greatest interest was the fact that George Whitefield suddenly died there, from an attack of asthma on the 30th of September, 1770. I thought it strange that the great Nonconformist was buried in the First Presbyterian church. It appears, however, that it was contrary to the law of Massachusetts for two Congregational churches to be formed in the same town, so the brethren who set up the second church, under the patronage of the good Mr. Parsons, adopted the Presbyterian polity to evade the law. In this church, under the pulpit, are buried all that is mortal of Mr. Parsons and another worthy, and Rev. George Whitefield. In the company of Rev. J. Spalding, D. D., and Hiram A. Sennet, Esq., I visited this old church. We descended into a cellar, through a trap-door behind the pulpit, and removing a padlock from an upright door, we entered the tomb of the great preacher. The coffin of Whitefield is placed across the other two, and the upper part of the lid opens upon hinges. We opened the coffin carefully, and by the light of our lamp saw all that was mortal of the eloquent divine, who had crossed the Atlantic thirteen times to preach the Gospel. The bones are blackened, as though they were charred by fire. The skull is perfect. I placed my hand on the forehead, and thought of the time when the active brain within trothed with love to God and man,—when those silent lips, moved by eloquent speech, swayed the people of England from the church-yard in Islington to Kensington Common, from the hills and valleys of Gloucestershire to the Cornish mines, and on through the growing colonies of America. In these days of High Church pantomime, when so many attempts are made to galvanize the dead past, would it not be well to turn our attention to the times of Whitefield and his glorious friend Wesley, to see what was done for the salvation of souls by the faith and power of these divinely inspired servants of Christ? Not by new decorations and scenery,—not by 'candles and crosses,'—not by what Wyelliffe boldly called the 'priests' rags,'—or by 'Pan Anglican Synods,'—or by moaning out bits of Scripture in unearthly chants,—but by such lives as those of Whitefield and Wesley are the people to be reached—and won. I confess that, as an Englishman, I envy America the possession of the earthly remains of dear George Whitefield; but perhaps it is appropriate that, while England claims the dust of Wesley, the Great Republic should be the guardian of the dust of his holy brother. May the two nations grow into a closer sympathy with each other, not only in the memory of the mighty dead, but in the living aspirations for truth and liberty."

The large distillery being built near Lexington, with a capacity of making 2,400 gallons of whisky per day, will commence operations on the 1st of January. This is the largest distillery in the county. Thirty others in that district will commence on the same day, and it is estimated that they will manufacture about 25,000 gallons of Bourbon and copper whisky per day.

Thieves are more actively at work in Fayette and adjoining counties than they have been for some time, although they cannot justly be charged with having been idle for months. The operation of hog-raising, especially, affords an expensive but correct indication of the state of the market, as most of the plunderers steal to supply the demands of receivers of stolen goods, through the country.

A Sensible Love Letter.

The following love letter was read in some court in France, not long since, pending a trial:

Mademoiselle—It was a saying of the celebrated Frenchman, Jean Jacques Rousseau, whose name you very likely cannot pronounce, that, to write a good love-letter, you ought to begin without knowing what you mean to say, and finish without knowing what you have written. [Laughter.] Now, with all due deference to Rousseau's talents in other respects, I may say I do not believe this saying to be true, and I shall endeavor to write in opposition to it. I mean to think about what I write to you, Mary, that I may guard against poisoning your mind with flattery, or saying anything that may offend you.—I wish you to understand that what I say I mean; that I neither write for writing's sake, nor to please my own fancy. I have, I hope, a higher aim, and a more honest and a more noble intention. I need not blush to my own object is to whisper in your ear a pure and tender tale of love.—[Laughter.] I entreat you to consider it as a symbol of the honesty and truthfulness of the writer, as a proof of his affection for you, and as a bond which shall unite us forever. Know then that from the moment I first beheld you I have felt a lively interest in your welfare, and your image has frequently presented itself in my mind. This will account for what passed between us on Sunday evening. "I have loved you for your beauty, but not (I hope) for that alone." [Laughter.] "Beauty is but skin deep," although it is very agreeable as every one knows. [Laughter.] It is not possible that I can know what other qualities you possess, but I should wish you to have a good knowledge of household matters. You may depend upon it that there is a good deal of domestic happiness in a well-dressed mutton chop [laughter] or a tidy breakfast for breakfast. [Laughter.] The woman who can cook contributes more to the happiness of society than the twenty who can not cook. [Great laughter.]

A Severe Case of Bots.

In Bath county, Kentucky, lives an old gentleman named Edmund Wells, commonly known among the youngsters, and indeed all other of his acquaintances, who are not a few, as "Uncle Ned." He has for many years held the office of Coroner of the county, or as he terms it, "the Crowne's place," and has also the contract for carrying the U. S. mail on horseback from Owingsville to the mouth of Big Sandy, a distance of near a hundred miles over a lonely mountain road. Uncle Ned is something of a humorist and has a constant habit of telling 'yarns,' in which he generally figures ludicrously as the hero. He talks in a low, drawling tone, and, with regard to the language he uses, never allows himself to be hampered by any of the rules of grammar or pronunciation.—His favorite story is concerning a battle with a mob of hornets, in which he was once engaged when a boy, with a company of comrades whom he had the honor of commanding. He says that "it was about the time of the war of 1812, everybody was 'beat in' up for volunteers, so I concluded one Sunday to heat me up a company. I soon succeeded in getting about twenty of the neighborhood boys together, and being anxious to try their pluck, I concluded to put them into action forthwith. I knew where there was a tremendous hornet's nest, and as captain of the company, astride of dad's blind mare, Old Poll, I marched the boys down to the set of war, formed in line of battle, and ordered them to pull off their shirts to show their bravery. I hauled mine off too; but took exceeding good care to wrap a blanket around me; then told brother Ben, who was my lieutenant, to run a stick into the hole to lead the hornets know that the enemy was there. About sixteen quarts of 'em lit on me, about a fourth on Old Poll, and the balance scattered themselves among the boys. I didn't stay to see how the boys fought, as old Poll took off with me through the woods. Being stalk blind she ran over a pile of logs and threw me about forty feet. Stunned by the fall and blinded by the stings of the hornets, I didn't get home till morning, but when I did get there, found dad with old Poll's head tied up to the limb of a tree, and drenching her for the bots."

Where would the party of universal enfranchise be without disfranchisement? Just figure it up: All Virginia disfranchised, 170,000 votes; all Texas, 65,000; all Mississippi, 70,000; in Missouri, 50,000; in Tennessee, 100,000; in the so-called reconstructed States, 150,000—total 605,000. Then, when they have taken this by disfranchisement, they, by negro suffrage, juggle in 750,000, making in all a difference of 1,350,000 votes. Can an election so carried be considered a fair one? Is this the voice of the people?

Our Paper.

It being an invariable custom for country newspapers to have holiday during Christmas, we will publish no paper next week. The present number, therefore, will close our first volume. One year ago we resumed the publication of the SENTINEL under various disadvantages, and with many predictions of failure. Our success has exceeded our most sanguine expectations. From all quarters came support and encouragement. We have endeavored throughout the past year to discharge our duty to the public—to make the SENTINEL a family newspaper, and to lay its foundations for usefulness and good. We are conscious of many imperfections, but thankful for the kind greetings and friendly welcomes accorded to our effort. We may be pardoned for saying further that we are elated at the high rank an independent public has given our paper among the journals of the land.

We will enter upon the New Year with renewed hope. We will spare no pains and labor to make the SENTINEL entertaining and useful, and trust we will merit by our conduct a continuation of the liberal patronage that has been extended to us.

We would especially call upon the citizens of Montgomery to come to our aid and support, and to assist us in building up on an enduring basis a paper that will be a source of benefit and pride to our county. Every farmer, mechanic and laborer in the county should subscribe and help us to extend our circulation. Such substantial favors will help them and benefit us.

With many thanks to the people of Montgomery and adjoining counties, and especially to the liberal business men of Mount Sterling for the support they have given us, we solicit for the ensuing year the same friendly aid and encouragement.

A New Way to Carry Elections.

The State of Louisiana cast 74,000 votes for Seymour and Blair. In spite of reconstruction and all its incidents, the Democracy carried the State. The radicals, by a species of political log-rolling, invented and patented by them, have rejected 70,000 of the votes so cast, leaving only a small number, 4,000, which is easily outnumbered by the vote of Grant; and so, by virtue of rascality and arithmetic genius, the electoral vote of Louisiana is to be counted for Grant and Colfax.

Seymour has carried Georgia by over 40,000. The indications are that matters will be so managed as to give this State also to the Republicans.

Reid was elected in the Fourth District in Indiana over Julian, yet by counting out the votes of one precinct, Julian has a small majority and has received from the Governor the certificate of election.

In Pennsylvania, the notorious John Covode was beaten by Foster, and by like frauds, Foster has been cheated out of his place and Covode declared elected.

This conduct is in keeping with the character of the Republican party. It is but a continuation of the outrages perpetrated by the Fortieth Congress in the cases of Gen. Morgan, John Young Brown and John D. Young. The voice of the people is nothing. No attention is paid to it. Elections are but a farce and end as well be abolished. The radicals reach for absolute power and scruple at no means to attain it. Why not say at once that Grant carried the electoral vote of all the States? Why not make it unanimous? If he carried Louisiana and Georgia, he also carried Kentucky and New York, and should have their votes.

Surely no party whose hold on power is maintained by the basest fraud, and who stop at no stretch of power and usurpation, can prosper long. The reason and sense and decency of the nation must revolt at such baseness.

Secretary McCulloch estimates that $158,044,011 will be the amount of the appropriations required for the civil service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1870. To this amount must be added $139,349,670, for interest on the public debt and for appropriations already made for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1870, also for still other appropriations already made $68,322,808. The total estimated expenditures for the year ending June 30, 1870, the Secretary places at $302,000,000.

Chief Justice Chase has notified other members of the Supreme Court that no consultation will be had on the Legal-tender case for some time to come. This will prevent any decision on this matter being made at the present time. It is understood no decision will be made until after the holidays.

A statement freely prevails in Washington that Reverdy Johnson writes that as soon as the protocol is agreed on for the settlement of the Alabama claims, he will return to this country to explain its features and urge its ratification by the Senate.

Matrimonial Traffic.

We hold up our hands in holy horror when we read that the damsels of Circassia with their soft, voluptuous beauty and wealth of personal charms are sold in the slave markets of Turkey. We point with feelings of exultation to our so-called superior civilization and rejoice in our immunity from barbarism, yet we fail to remember that, in our boasted society, men still buy their wives. We have not, it is true, the open markets of Constantinople where fair maidens are disposed of, at so many dollars per head, but worse still, veiled under the garb of higher progress, we have a social despotism where matrimony is a traffic, and woman merchandise.

The mothers in the land have but one thought and that is to marry their daughters to rich men. Balls, hops, watering-places, theatres and operas are but so many places of advertisement where the female commodities are taken to show off their wickeries and enveigle husbands. The young women are now brought up to no habits of industry and are untalented in domestic duties and household lore. In infancy, in girlhood, designing and heartless mammas din into their ears one perpetual lesson: marry rich, and when they come on the stage, they begin to act on the advice and to love is a word not in their vocabulary and marriage based on love is a thing of olden days. No matter if a man is as ugly as the limping devil Amundus or Grecian Thersites; no matter if he be as dissolute as Alcibiades; as cruel as Nero; no matter if he is so old that he has to dye his grey hairs to make him youthful, or bendage his lean shanks in flannels to keep off the rheumatism, no matter if he have blots and blurs on his family escutcheon as broad as a Jewish phylactery, provided he is rich, provided he has lands and tenements, houses and hereditaments, chosen in action and balance in bank, he is sought after like precious stones and if he be disposed to marriage a bargain can be struck with him without many preliminaries. The girl of eighteen summers has beauty, perhaps rank and station. He has money. The quid pro quo and the contract is made. Jupiter again conquers Diana with the golden shower.

The conduct of the gentler sex on the subject of marriage and their false training have abolished all distinctions between men of sense and fools. The fool has the readiest access to their favor, if he has large expectations. We have seen young ladies intensely delighted with the silly, common-place and weary platitudes of some beetle-browed, simpering, whining, ninny hammer and graceless nincompoop because he was rich. His monkey grimaces, his short coat, his tight pants, and feathery moustache, seemed to her the essence of aesthetics. Without an idea in his head, with no purpose in life, and no energy and pluck in his composition, to battle for existence and bread should misfortune overtake him, with no backbone or nerve, the flimsy gelatinous thing is the very rose and expectancy of intriguing mothers and an apple of gold in a silver frame, to the matrimonial eyes of ambitious girls. The poor young man, no matter what his merit may be, no matter how broad a foundation he may be laying for usefulness and distinction, no matter how well disciplined his mind nor what stores of thought and learning his diligence may have accumulated, is thrust aside as ineligible. He is pronounced a bad match. His poverty can be scented afar off as the war-horse of Job smelled the battle. He is weighed in the matrimonial scales and found wanting. He has no palatial residence, no extensive grounds,—he is poor, ability to work, willingness to work, energy, enterprise, manhood are nothing, compared to broad acres, government bonds, and the ring of the clinking coin.

Nor should the young men of this generation escape censure for their sordid views on the subject of marriages. Many of them are also trained for heiness hunting as the Arab is trained to hunt elephants; and instead of hoping to rise in the world by dint of work, they live in the expectation of marrying rich and squatting down on property they never earned. How often do we hear them ask when a young lady's name is mentioned, "Is she rich?" They never inquire whether she has been educated in the domestic virtues, whether she has wealth of character and amiability and gentleness and the fine qualities and impulses that consecrate and hallow the marriage relation. We have often been amused and oftener disgusted at the intrigues of families in failing or moderate circumstances, to pension off their needy and adventurous sons by marrying them to rich girls. We have seen heiresses even chased and cornered by complicated family diplomacy that would be creditable to Tallyrand until they took their furnished suitors to escape annoyance.

"Money is a good soldier and will on," says Falstaff. It is a good thing to have in a family as the officer said about a gunboat when he found protection under its guns from the fire of the enemy. It buys good clothes, meat and bread, pure air, fine residences, and books. But when it is made the measure for manhood and womanhood in the matter of marriage, when love is sacrificed on the altar of Mammon and Venus yields to Plutus, there is "something rotten in Denmark" and that social system based on this idea is essentially wrong, false and perverse of true domestic felicity. Marriage is a sacrament with whose celebration money has very little to do.

While society generally, in the higher walks, is making marriage a bargain, and sale, while on the one hand it is disposing of so much lace and corsets and crinolines, for so much money, and on the other, so much broadcloth, and puppyism and impudence, also for so many ducats, we rejoice that there is some health left in the midst of this moral pestilence; that there are some young ladies who cannot be bought and some young men who will not sell their birth-right for a mess of pottage.

Mustered Out.

An order from Gen. Howard dated the 17th Nov. conveys the welcome intelligence that the Freedmen's Bureau, pursuant to an act of Congress of July 25, 1868 is to be discontinued in all the States, after the 31st of December, except the educational department, and such agents as may be necessary for the collection and payment of claims of negroes who were in the military service of the Government. For each of the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Tennessee Kentucky one assistant Commissioner and Chief Superintendent of schools will be retained; one disbursing officer for the educational department and the payment of bounties and from one to four assistant superintendents of school in each state.

While this arrangement shuts out a large number of retainers and simplifies the cumbersome and expensive machinery, one odious and detestable feature remains and that is the establishment and perpetuation of schools in the State at the expense of the general government. The order of discontinuance provides for continuance of quite a respectable number of officials in the educational department whose business it will be to see that Cuffee is learned in books. It has been well said that "the United States Government is doubly prostituted when it legislates partially of legislates at all, for a class. States cap and must in time, provide for all internal government, for police, for schools, for suffrage for everything for which the Federal Constitution does not provide. This Freedmen's Bureau is an asylum for two classes of miserable citizens—those who can make public office a private hospital and those who make it a receiving net of public plunder. It has done no real good, certainly none at all which has not been overbalanced by harm. It is expensive, against the genius of self-governing States, unconstitutional and as a precedent every way dangerous." Certainly it would have been much better for all classes that the Bureau should have been abolished unconditionally. The continuance of any part of it cannot be viewed without feelings of disgust.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM JERUSALEM.—"We started early to ascend Mt. Olivet, to behold the sun gild the minarets and towers of the devoted city, from the place where memory, stirred by a thousand associations, should exalt the mind as well as the eye to the inspiration of the scene. Well is the voyager repaid for long travels, horrid roads, antediluvian cookery, squalid companionship and the importunities of begging, thieving Arabs. Well would it have repaid you, oh! man of commerce and the crucible! and well might you have been reminded of your own city, for here, painted upon a board nailed against one of the huge ancient olive trees, under which the sacred martyrs toiled for the sins of the world, eighteen hundred years ago, were these familiar figures, S. T.—1860—X. We do not know who did it, but no doubt some poor invalid traveler, cured by the Plantation Bitters, wished to advertise their virtues in a place from whence all knowledge flows."

MAGNOLIA WATER.—Superior to the best imported German Cologne, and sold at half the price.

A Washington special to the Courier-Journal, says the national suffrage amendment is not likely to pass Congress. A canvass of the House by some of its supporters show that it will not get a majority vote, to say nothing of the required two-thirds. The proposed amendment is pending before the Judiciary Committee of both Houses, and that of the Senate is expected to report adversely to it at an early day. Among those who oppose the amendment are some of Grant's strongest supporters.

Gen. Harney is reported to have said that "the Government ought to adopt a policy of feeding the Indians on the Plains. It would be cheaper to board them at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, in New York, than to fight them."

A Mississippi paper says the crops that have not failed this season are pumpkins and boy babies.

The New York Times says that a scheme is on foot to have the tax on whisky again raised to two dollars, and Congress is being quietly secured to support it.

It is thought that the mantle of Thad. Stevens, as leader of the House will fall upon the shoulders of Boutwell, of Massachusetts.

"ROSADALIS."

"We never commenced a thing to the public until we knew just what it is, and that is why having the greatest confidence in the preparation, we can earnestly recommend to a suffering public, Dr. Lawrence's compound extract of Rosadalis."

"It is unrivaled as a blood purifier, and is a certain cure for scrofula in all its various forms, chronic rheumatism, sore eyes, eruptions of the skin, and all diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys and bladder. After eradicating every species of humor and had taken it restores the system to a healthy and vigorous condition, and never produces the slightest injury in any shape."

"Of the patent compound medicines, the Rosadalis is not compounded of unknown ingredients, but the list of articles from which it is compounded is published and wrapped about each bottle, and wherever it has been introduced the Medical Faculty have most highly recommended it."

"Dr. Lawrence has thousands of the best kind of testimonials from sufferers who have been relieved through the medium of Rosadalis. As soon as it became a little known, it was extensively used, and the manufacturer found it necessary to remove to Baltimore, in order to be able to support the unprecedented demand."

"The Rosadalis is everything that is claimed for it, which fact is evidenced by its rapid sale, and the good reputation it has already obtained. Dr. J. J. Lawrence & Co., Sole Proprietors and Manufacturers, Baltimore, Md."

THE SENTINEL.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1868.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

Chiles & Jones have all kinds of notions and fireworks for the holidays. The little people should give them a call.

Last call to those indebted to us to come and pay their accounts at once.

FRANK, GUM & CO.

B. F. Cockrell, Esq., of this county, killed one day last week a pig eight months old, which netted 280 pounds.

Reese's display of fine jewelry cannot be surpassed in the Western country. Go there for holiday presents.

Mack O'Connell has on hand another lot of the celebrated "Matthews Twist" chewing tobacco. Everybody that uses it pronounces it a number one article.

Santa Claus has established his headquarters in this town at Chiles & Jones' grocery. He is desirous of making the acquaintance of the young folks.

Our friend Parris, of the Winchester Democrat, accompanied by his amiable and accomplished wife, attended the grand dedication ball in this place on Friday night last.

Reese has secured the agency for the "National Watch Company," of Elgin, Ill. Their time-keepers are said to be the best. If they were not, Reese wouldn't keep them.

Mrs. Laughlin sold on Monday last to Jas. Turley, Esq., sixty five acres of land adjoining the Montgomery distillery, about one mile from this town, at $117 50 per acre. No improvements.

See advertisement of F. St. Julien in another column. He has just received direct from the manufacturers in the East, a large stock of solid silver and silver plated ware, suitable for bridal and holiday presents. Give Saint a call.

M. J. Power, the painter, has returned to our town and resumed business. Manicure is a number one workman, and his prices are as reasonable as those of any other first-class artist. His shop is under the National Hotel.

The handsomest things we have seen recently are the cups and saucers to match at Hoffman & Co.'s. They are all finely painted, and the beauty of the work is that it will never fade or rub off. They are very appropriate for Christmas or New Year presents.

By far the richest display of holiday goods we have ever seen is now on exhibition at Reese's Jewelry Store on Main Street. His stock of solid silver and silver plated ware would do credit to any city house. His goods are of the latest and most fashionable designs.

Santa Claus in his visit to this town paid our friend Mack O'Connell a call, and left in his possession a large assortment of Christmas Tricks. Mack has an endless variety of fire-works and other notions for Young America and his sister. Remember the children's friend, and give Mack a call when you spend your dimes.

HANDSOME CHRISTMAS GOODS.—Hoffman & Co. have received a handsome line of goods for the holidays. Their stock of China is the most extensive ever offered in this market. They have French China tea sets from $15 upwards. Persons desiring to make a Christmas or New Year's present can do no better than to give them a call, and buy something useful as well as attractive.

Chiles & Jones will accept our thanks for a pound of excellent chewing tobacco. We can safely assert that they have on hand as fine an assortment of tobacco and cigars as can be found anywhere. Their stock of family groceries is large and fresh, consisting as it does of everything in their line from a box of matches to a hog-head of sugar. Our readers can patronize no more worthy gentlemen than Boas and Henry.

CASED.—J. D. Trapp, Esq., of Lexington, Grand Master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Kentucky, was severely cased in this place on Friday evening last. The affair occurred in Hoffman & Co.'s store, and Mr. Trapp on one side and Messrs. Wm. Hoffman and T. H. Probert on the other side, were the principal actors. The case used was of ebony, with a beautiful gold head upon it, and we understand, cost ninety dollars. Bro. Trapp's conduct while here richly merited the casing, and we were glad to notice that he submitted with very good grace. In the language of "Old Probe," there were no "philanthropic remarks" made.

Our young and handsome friend, Johnny Ramsey, of Owensville, has on hand at his store in our neighboring town a large and complete stock of hardware, stoves, &c. His stock of builders' hardware is very large. Johnny informs us that he is determined to build up a trade in Bath in his line of business, and in order to do so, he has marked his goods down to the lowest figures. His pleasant manners and address are bound to win him friends. We wish him an abundance of good luck.

On the 18th inst., the members of Watson Lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F., dedicated their new hall in this place. This hall is perhaps one of the finest in the State. It is on Maysville Street, in the third story of the new building recently erected by Messrs. Tenny & Lord. It is finished in the highest style of art, and furnished with taste and elegance. The chairs, tables, &c., are of the most approved, durable and exquisite workmanship, and everything about the spacious room reflects the highest credit on those who designed and completed it. The hall is provided with costly chandeliers, and, as we have before announced, is lighted with Pneumatic gas.

On the morning of the 18th the solemn and impressive dedicatory services were held in the hall, and it was consecrated with appropriate ceremonies. The Grand Master of the State, J. D. Trapp, was present, and other distinguished visiting brethren. After the dedication, the Brotherhood, preceded by Saxton's celebrated band, marched in procession to the new Christian Church, where an address on the purposes and aims of Odd Fellowship was delivered by Rev. J. W. Venables, of Versailles, and Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of the United States. The address was full of beautiful thoughts, large benevolence and kindly charity, and was heard with marked attention. At its close, B. A. Senter, Esq., presented to the speaker, on behalf of Watson Lodge and Lodge Encampment, a beautiful cane, accompanying the presentation with a happy and well delivered speech, which was responded to in brief and appropriate terms by the fortunate donee. The services at the Church being over, the brotherhood returned to their hall, and with many citizens of town and county, partook of a sumptuous and bountiful dinner, prepared by the ladies of the town and vicinity and the friends of the order generally. Everything was in profusion, and the table fairly groaned under the weight of their dainties and well prepared viands.

The 18th was the 221st anniversary of Watson Lodge, whose condition is as prosperous as the most sanguine could desire. Its numbers are constantly increasing, and its field for good and usefulness extending. May its prosperity continue!

The most unique thing we have seen is the "Cuckoo Clock" at Reese's Jewelry establishment. It is worth more than the price of the clock to hear the Cuckoo sing. Go and see it.

The Dedication Ball.

The dedication hop given by the Odd Fellows at their new hall in this place on Friday night last was a most delightful and brilliant affair in every respect. The "sweet memories" of the few brief hours passed there will ever run like silver threads through the web of the time of life. To say that the beauty and chivalry of Montgomery and the adjoining counties were fully represented there, is speaking far too tamely. The scene presented in the ball room was entrancingly beautiful, while from the excellent band—

"Sound o'erflowed the listener's brain
So sweet that joy was almost pain."
Whole troops of fairy forms, as beautiful as a dream of poetry that may not be written or told, and whose airy feet were match

For the blithe humming birds uniting wings, were flitting with gleesome grace through the giddy mazes of the dance. We dare not particularize where all were charming. There were winsome maidens "fairer than tongue can name," and noble matrons "rich in love, full of wisdom, and perfect in the plenitude of beauty." There were forms "worthy the lofty Seraphim," and cheeks whose soft changing bloom was like that which—

"The forest hue
Of fountain gazing roses fills the waters."
And eyes
"Like the deep blue boundless heavens,
Their living lashes, dark, far measureless,
Orb within orb, and line through line interwoven."

And amid all these was the merry melody of voices speaking softly—
"Words which were sweetly dropped
As honey from the comb," from deep lips, whose deep magic
"Gave such power
As music knew not till that hour."

But we shall have to stop, lest we think we are young again.
The supper prepared by the indefatigable Probert, would have done credit to Delmonico. The tables fairly groaned under the weight of the good things. Taking it all in all it was a most delightful entertainment, one of those "nights of undecaying joy," which form a pleasant resting place for memory in after days, an oasis in the desert of man's existence. May we have many more such.

What could more appropriate for a holiday present than a selection from Reese's rich display of Jewelry and Silver Ware? A gift of this kind would be both useful and attractive.

A man giving his name as John Brown, was arrested in this town on Tuesday night last, having in his possession a forged order for fifty dollars with the name of our countryman Jabez Dooley signed to it. We are told that he confessed the order was a forgery after being arrested.

R. T. Smith continues to keep all kinds of Coffins and Metallic Burial Cases, and a great variety of lumber.

Christmas.

When this number of our paper reaches many of our readers Christmas with its attendant festivities will be upon them. The entire week beginning with Christmas day and ending with New Year's day, has been from time immemorial, held by all nations and peoples who have accepted the Christian faith, a week of jubilee, for the morning star of Christmas day pointed the wise men of the east to the manger of a stable in Bethlehem, where the prophecy was fulfilled, and the man child, THE CHRIST, was born. The ensuing week witnessed the adoration, and has ever since, been held as a season of especial joy and thanksgiving by the church. It was a week of holiday for slaves, and was observed in our own country up to the recent war. It is hard to tell at what period Christmas was ushered in by the ringing of bells, firing of guns, and explosion of fire-works. But it is especially a season of joy to the young folks. Then their patron Saint, the Brotherhood, preceded by Saxton's celebrated band, marched in procession to the new Christian Church, where an address on the purposes and aims of Odd Fellowship was delivered by Rev. J. W. Venables, of Versailles, and Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of the United States. The address was full of beautiful thoughts, large benevolence and kindly charity, and was heard with marked attention. At its close, B. A. Senter, Esq., presented to the speaker, on behalf of Watson Lodge and Lodge Encampment, a beautiful cane, accompanying the presentation with a happy and well delivered speech, which was responded to in brief and appropriate terms by the fortunate donee. The services at the Church being over, the brotherhood returned to their hall, and with many citizens of town and county, partook of a sumptuous and bountiful dinner, prepared by the ladies of the town and vicinity and the friends of the order generally. Everything was in profusion, and the table fairly groaned under the weight of their dainties and well prepared viands.

The 18th was the 221st anniversary of Watson Lodge, whose condition is as prosperous as the most sanguine could desire. Its numbers are constantly increasing, and its field for good and usefulness extending. May its prosperity continue!

The most unique thing we have seen is the "Cuckoo Clock" at Reese's Jewelry establishment. It is worth more than the price of the clock to hear the Cuckoo sing. Go and see it.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

The Great Pictorial Annual.
Hoster's United States Almanac for 1869, for distribution, gratis, throughout the United States and all civilized countries of the Western Hemisphere, will be published about the first of January, and all who wish to understand the true philosophy of health should read and ponder the valuable suggestions it contains. In addition to an admirable medical treatise on the causes, prevention and cure of a great variety of diseases, it embraces a large amount of information interesting to the merchant, the mechanic, the miner, the farmer, the planter, and professional man; and the calculations have been made for such meridians and latitudes as are most suitable for a correct and comprehensive National Almanac.

The nature, uses, and extraordinary sanitary effects of HOSSETT'S STOMACH BITTERS, the simple tonic and alterative of more than half the Christian world, are fully set forth in its pages, which are also interspersed with pictorial illustrations, valuable recipes for the household and farm, humorous anecdotes, and other instructive and amusing reading matter original and selected. Among the Annuals to appear with the opening of the year, this will be one of the most useful, and may be had for the asking. Send for copies to the Central Manufacturing Co. at Pittsburg, Pa., or to the nearest dealer in HOSSETT'S STOMACH BITTERS. The BITTERS are sold in every city, town and village of the United States.

THE SINGER HAS NO EQUAL.

Sewing Machine.

THE SUPERIOR MERITS of the "Singer" Machines over all others, for either Family use or Manufacturing purposes, are so well established and so generally admitted, that an enumeration of their relative excellencies is no longer considered necessary.

NEW FAMILY MACHINE.
Which has been brought to perfection regardless of time, labor or expense, is now confidently presented to the public as incomparably the BEST SEWING MACHINE IN EXISTENCE.

The Machine in question is SIMPLE, COMPACT, DURABLE AND BEAUTIFUL.
It is quiet, tight running, and CAPABLE OF PERFORMING A RANGE AND VARIETY OF WORK never before attempted upon a single Machine, using either Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, and sewing with equal facility the very finest and coarsest materials, and anything between the two extremes, in the most beautiful and substantial manner. Its attachments for Hemming, Binding, Cording, Tucking, Quilting, Trimming, Binding, etc., are Novel, Practical, and have been invented and adjusted especially for this Machine.

New designs of the Unique, Useful, and Popular Folding Tops and Cabinet Cases, peculiar to the Machines manufactured by this company, have been prepared for enclosing the new Machine.

A faint idea, however, can at best be conveyed through the medium of a (necessarily) limited advertisement; and we therefore urge every person in quest of a Sewing Machine by all means to examine and test it. If they can possibly do so, off the leading retail Machines before making a purchase. A selection can then be made understandingly. Lager Beer.
BY JOSH BILLINGS.
I have finally come to the conclusion that lager beer as a beverage is not intoxicating. I have been told by a German who said he had drunk it all night long, just to try the experiment, and was obliged to go home entirely sober in the morning. I have seen this same man drink eighteen glasses, and if he was drunk he was drunk in German, and nobody could understand it. It is proper enough to state that this man kept a lager beer saloon, and could have no object in stating what was not strictly true.

I believed him to the full extent of my ability. I never drank but three glasses of lager in my life, and that made me head outwitted as the old saying is. I was told that it was owing to my bile being out of place, and I guess that it was so, for I never biled over more than I did when I got him that note. My wife told I was going to die, and I was afraid that I shouldn't, for it seemed as though everything that I had ever eaten in my life was coming to the surface, and I believe that if my wife hadn't pulled off my boots just as she did they would have come thundering up too.

Oh how sick I was 14 years ago, and I can taste it now.

I never had so much experience in so short a time. If my man should tell me that lager beer was not intoxicating I should believe him, but if he should tell that I wasn't drunk that night, but that my stomach was out of order, I should ask him to state over in a few words, just how a man felt and acted when he was set up.

If I wasn't drunk that night, I had same as the most natural simptoms that a man ever had, and kept sober.

In the first place it was about 80 rods from where I drank the lager beer to my house, and I was over two hours on the road, and had a hole busted through each one of my pantaloons, and didn't have any hat, and tried to open the door by the bell pull, and hiccupped awfully, and saw everything in the room trying to get on the back side of me; and in setting down on a chair, I didn't wait long enough for it to get exactly under me, when it was going round, and I set down a little too soon and missed the chair about 12 inches, and couldn't get upon my feet to take the next one that came along; and that ain't all, my wife said I was drunk as a bear, and as I said before, I began to spin up things freely.

If lager beer is not intoxicating I used mean, that I know. Still I hardly think that lager beer is intoxicating, for I have been told so; and I am probably the only man living who ever drunk enny when his liver was not plump.

I don't want to say anything again a harmless temperance beverage, but if ever I drink any more, it will be with my hands tied behind me, and my mouth pried open. I don't think lager beer is intoxicating, but if I remember right, I think it tastes to me like a glass of soup soda, that a pickle had been put in it.

Nose Bleed.
There are two little arteries which supply the whole face with blood, one on each side; these branch off from the main arteries on each side of the windpipe, and running upward toward the eyes, pass over the outside of the jaw bone, about two-thirds of the way back from the chin to the angle of the jaw, under the ear. Each of these arteries, of course, supplies just one-half of the face, the nose being the dividing line, the left nostril is supplied with blood by the left artery and the right nostril by the right artery. Now, supposing your nose bleeds by the right nostril, with the end of the forefinger feel along the outer edge of the right jaw until you feel the beating of the artery directly under your finger, the same as the pulse in your wrist, then press the finger hard upon it, thus getting the little fellow in a tight place between your finger and the jaw-bone; the result will be that not a drop of blood goes into that side of your face while the pressure continues; hence the nose instantly stops bleeding for want of blood to flow; continue the pressure for five or ten minutes and the ruptured vessels in the nose will by that time probably contract so that when you let the blood into them they will not leak. Bleeding from an ear or wound anywhere about the face may be stopped in the same way. The Creator probably placed these arteries as they are that they might be controlled.—Those to the back of the head, arms and legs are all arranged very conveniently for being controlled in like manner.

It is a singular fact, observes one of our exchanges, that no President of the United States; up to the present time, has had a child born in the White House.—It is understood that the fact will not long exist after the 4th of March.

The State canvassers have closed the canvass of the Electoral ticket in New York. The Democratic majority is 9,963. Democratic vote, 429,857, Republican vote, 419,867.

DATTON PATENT SAFETY BRIDLE BIT,
Patented August 6, 1867.
This is the best Bit ever invented. It combines the principle of all Patent Cheek Rins and other Safety Bits in a very simple bit, without any complicated arrangements. By the use of this bit a boy can drive any horse at any speed, and pull him up whenever he desires—having a pull purchase and more advantage than he need employ. Horse men are invited to call and examine it.
REPAIRING done with neatness and Dispatch. Hocking you will call and examine my stock, I remain, Very Respectfully,
THOMAS CLARK, Main-St., Mt. Sterling Ky.
